

Public transport push persists

ANYONE interested in trying to improve public transport in South Gippsland and Bass Coast shires and beyond is welcome to attend a meeting in Lang Lang this Thursday evening.

The newly formed South West Gippsland Public Transport Users Group is gathering at the Lang Lang Hotel to determine an executive. Leongatha public transport advocate Max Semken said yesterday he is keen to pursue a technical and population role with the group.

“I’ve been studying population trends for the past 10 years.”

Mr Semken believes the region is set for a population boom that will place greater demand on public transport and a lobby group is needed to push for the improvements.
